GREEK AND THE SCIENCES
Innovations in the Courses Offered Here Now.

Greek is being put to practical use in the University. The students of the different sciences are being given an opportunity to learn the real significance of scientific terms by learning their derivation.

It is a well known that scientific terms are derived largely from Greek words. A student finds it a help to know as many as possible of the Greek roots from which these terms are formed. A course is now being given by opportunity to do this. It is being taken by eighteen students of medicine. There is no study of declensions or of rules of grammar. After learning the alphabet, which is considered easy since most of the letters have a corresponding letter in English, the student proceeds at once to learn Greek words and the scientific terms derived from them.

The work is given to three sections, one for students of medicine, one for students of zoology, and one for students of chemistry and geology. The sections meet once a week and the credit is one hour.

Another innovation is in the course in elementary Greek. This course is no longer a mere preparation for reading the Anabasis, but aims to give the student a vocabulary of Greek words from which English words are formed and to teach the English words so derived. The vocabulary is confined to words of that kind and students find little difficulty in remembering them, because they have something familiar with which to associate them. Along with this are taught the fundamental principles of grammar, so that in a short time they are able to read easy Greek.

TRAINING

Over one fourth of the millions examined in the draft were found to be physically deficient. These can no more do their part fully in civil life than in military. Their deficiencies are a burden upon themselves and all the rest of us.
The J. F. Bruce system, as set forth by Colonel Frazier in his new book
TRAINING, shows the way out.

Last Warning to University Students

If you are planning to go to the Varsity Day program at the Hall Theater Monday night, Dec. 13, we urge that you buy your ticket as soon as possible.

Because of the unprecedented demand from the Christian College, Stephens College and Columbia and University High students, as well as the great demand from the residents of Columbia for seats, many will be disappointed when they try to get tickets.

As a University production we want all University students to have a chance to see "In Tigertown" the four-reel film which is destined to make Missouri famous. Of the three vodevil acts presented, two will constitute distinct novelties: Faucett W. Ross, late of the Gertrude Hoffman revue, in his first appearance before a Columbia theatrical audience and the University Glee Club in their first appearance of the year. The other, act presented by Hagemann, Houston and Rodgers, has won on its merit in several local performances.

If you plan to get in, buy that ticket early.

Seats are on sale at The Palms, The Pennant, Harris' and The CO-OP
Three shows—Matinee and two night performances
